

Healthcare

Healthcare providers and institutions today face a large and complex array of legal, regulatory and market challenges. The healthcare industry is experiencing a period of rapid evolution and change unlike that seen before. Navigating this landscape requires experienced counsel and guidance.

Manning Fulton is committed to providing exceptional counsel and guidance to clients of all sizes in this dynamic and fast changing area. Our experienced and industry-focused attorneys provide counsel to a wide variety of healthcare clients with respect to ongoing legal matters as well as special projects involving regulatory matters, transactions and litigation. Our attorneys have represented large and small physician practice groups, hospitals and ambulatory surgical centers, medical and dental management organizations, independent practice associations (IPAs), medical clinics, and numerous other healthcare providers and organizations.

Healthcare clients often have matters that cross over different specialty areas, and are not limited to solely one or two specific practice areas. This often occurs in connection with transactions, contractual arrangements, formation of new entities and other matters. In these cases, a multi-disciplinary team approach is followed to assure that our clients receive needed assistance from attorneys in other related areas such as tax, corporate and real estate to deliver the best advice in the most efficient manner.
