Tarihya McClain is a St. Louis native who grew up in the Florissant area. Before starting law school, McClain worked at a substance abuse facility and realized she had a knack for helping the facility solve complex legal and financial issues. Before long, she decided to make a career pivot into the field of law. McClain completed her Juris Doctorate degree at Saint Louis University School of Law in December 2022. During her academic tenure, McClain served as a law clerk for the MacArthur Justice Center, a legal research intern for Georgetown University School of Law, a law clerk for a small personal injury firm in downtown St. Louis, and as a student attorney assisting families in need with family-law-related issues. She has a diverse background and brings a breadth of knowledge and experience to the firm. She is currently licensed to practice in Missouri and works on civil defense litigation, municipal law, and insurance law matters.
