

This morning we had the delightful experience of going to the flagship store of Bloomingdale's at 59th Street for a very sweet treat: we met with Stephen D'Urso, Richard Mast, Anne Keating, Tony Spring and Charles Anderson of Bloomingdale's to celebrate their generous support of delivery vans. Before the flagship store's doors opened early today, staff members passed out our world-famous brownies to their peers and encouraged their colleagues to go see the Bloomingdale's and Macy's/God's Love van parked just outside.

In recent years, as we have moved to our Chilled/Frozen delivery model, Bloomingdale's and Macy's have been one of the first to purchase our new vans, fitted with freezers, in order for us to take on this change. Their support has meant so much and it always will. Bloomingdale's and Macy's are also very proud to be supporting our Expansion Campaign at God's Love We Deliver. For their very generous gift to the campaign, God's Love will be naming our new volunteer reception area after Bloomingdale's and Macy's.

We had a wonderful morning at Bloomingdale's today and, again, we are so grateful for the support of Bloomingdale's and Macy's over the years. Brownies seemed to be the breakfast of champions today, as most people gobbled up our celebratory brownies—certainly enjoying the love!

See our Flickr album and check out our photos on Facebook.

