

Volunteers filling bags with meals at Community Servings in Boston. The organization is poised to nearly triple its meal production with a $21 million expansion of its headquarters. Credit: Kayana Szymczak for The New York Times

8.21.18 / Policy

“If Food Is Medicine, These Are the Labs”

The New York Times recently featured God's Love We Deliver and other medically tailored meal organizations from the national Food Is Medicine Coalition (FIMC) in an article about our innovation in healthcare. The article discusses the important policy and research work that is being done on the national level and also features Community Servings, our peer organization in Boston, and their recent expansion project. Our own expansion of the Michael Kors building in 2015 was also featured, as well as the collective work of the Food is Medicine Coalition. Read more via the link below.

Related Blog Posts

4.4.22 / Policy

Food is Medicine and is Essential to Achieving Racial Equity in Health

“People get sick because of racism not because of race.” We see this searing truth, declared by Dr. Camara Phyllis Jones, epidemiologist and former president of the American Public Health Association, play out every day. Whi...

3.21.22 / Policy

Powering Client Growth with Community Project Funding

We are thrilled to announce that God's Love We Deliver has received Community Project Funding in the recently passed Omnibus Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 2022. This new Community Project Funding initiative allows...

2.17.22 / Policy

Introducing The Aspen Institute Food Is Medicine Research Action Plan

In January, Food & Society at the Aspen Institute and the Center for Health Law and Policy Innovation of Harvard Law School (CHLPI) released the Food is Medicine Research Action Plan outlining a comprehensive set of recom...