One of the largest gatherings for intellectual property professionals kicks off later this month in Washington, D.C, and attorney Erica Rogers is taking an active role behind the scenes.

The International Trademark Association (INTA) will host its 144th Annual Meeting from April 30 to May 4. Erica assisted in planning the First-Time Registrant Orientation and Reception, which will take place on the first day of the conference for newcomers.

The multiday event features business development networking, unparalleled IP education, and insight from the international community on the challenges—and opportunities—brands face today. For those who can't attend in person, INTA also offers a virtual option. You can learn more about the Annual Meeting, including viewing the full schedule, COVID-19 protocols, and registration, here.

Erica is an active INTA member. She has served on a number of committees, including the copyright and young practitioners committees. She was also awarded INTA's inaugural Tomorrow's Leaders Award in 2017. This recognition honors "outstanding young practitioners for their early leadership merits in the intellectual property (IP) industry, including candidates who have been practicing trademark law for five years or less."
