

Ward and Smith Attorneys to Speak at ASAP 2022 Business of Farming Conference

February 21, 2022

Attorneys Jenny Boyer, Bill Durr, and Devon Williams are featured presenters at the 2022 Business of Farming Conference on Saturday, February 26 at the Mission Health/A-B Tech Conference Center in Asheville.

Attendees will learn how to protect their farms with the help of this Ward and Smith trio. Their interactive session will focus on legal tools for farmers, including business formation, labor and employment, litigation (how to avoid it and what to do if you cannot resolve a dispute), legalities of farming on leased land, and estate planning/succession planning issues.

In addition to their presentation, Jenny, Bill, and Devon will all participate in the conference's Ask a Lawyer program, where they will share legal information and address general questions regarding legal rights, requirements, and restrictions as it relates to your agribusiness. Disclaimer: In the absence of an attorney-client relationship, attorneys will not be able to provide legal advice.

The 2022 Business of Farming Conference is hosted annually by the Appalachian Sustainable Agriculture Project (ASAP). Ward and Smith is also a proud sponsor of the sold-out event.

For more information, including joining a waitlist to register and the full agenda, visit

<https://asapconnections.org/events/business-of-farming-conference/>.