Craddock Returns to UNC School of Law as Instructor for Holderness Moot Court Advanced Skills Training Workshop

NEWS | SEPTEMBER 23, 2015

Angela Farag Craddock recently returned to UNC School of Law for the 4th consecutive year as an Instructor-In-Residence to assist UNC law students at this year's Holderness Moot Court Advanced Skills Training Workshop. The Holderness Moot Court pioneered these one-day workshops four years ago to bring all 2L and 3L Holderness members (approximately 100 students) in direct contact with practicing attorneys and judges in a program featuring a fast-paced mix of plenary sessions, panels of local practitioners, skills training across the various team disciplines (client counseling, negotiation, and appellate advocacy), and more focused team-specific drills. In connection with this year's program, Angela spoke as a panelist on the topic of writing the winning brief, and worked directly with students on the Negotiations Teams by observing and providing feedback on their mock negotiation exercises.
