
Craddock Speaks at UNC Women in Law Luncheon

NEWS | NOVEMBER 4, 2014

Angela Farag Craddock returned to UNC School of Law to serve as a panelist at the annual Women In Law Luncheon on October 22. Hosted by Women in Law, the panel included prominent female attorneys who spoke to members about various topics. The purpose of Women in Law is to address concerns and issues facing women who are entering the legal profession by creating a system of social and educational support for women and those concerned with women's issues during their legal education. This system serves as a network by which women law students are introduced into the existing community of female lawyers and to other students, lawyers, employers, professors and judges who are committed to the growth of females in the legal profession. Angela was also a panelist at the 2013 event.
