SERVICE | SEPTEMBER 19, 2017

Helping you do what's right for you and your workplace.

Young Moore successfully represents clients in employment litigation in federal and state courts, in arbitration proceedings and before the EEOC and other administrative agencies over issues arising in the workplace. These cases may be based on state and federal statutes and regulations, common law causes of action and contractual principles. These matters include cases claiming discrimination on account of race, sex, religion, age, national origin and disability under state and federal law. They also include cases relating to sexual and racial harassment, wrongful discharge, wage and hour issues, retaliatory discharge claims, workplace privacy claims, FMLA charges, OSHA charges and workers compensation claims.

At Young Moore, we also work with clients on covenants not to compete, trade secrets, employment contract provisions and other workplace issues. The firm also handles cases and advises clients with respect to matters dealing with employment benefits issues arising under statutes including the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA), Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA) and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA).

Clients count on Young Moore and Henderson for our proven ability to handle confidential and high-profile cases with sensitivity, including those that may involve investigations surrounding employee misconduct or harassment. We also provide assistance to employers in preparation of employee handbooks and policies designed to comply with law and avoid litigation.

We also handle matters and provide advice relating to employment practices liability insurance. Firm members have presented papers and have spoken at state, national and international seminars on employment law. We handle these matters competently and forcefully while providing clients good value. See also our Employment Law practice area.
